Statement of Purpose

St. Mark's School of Texas is a nonsectarian, college preparatory independent day school for boys in grades 1-12. The Charter states that the school is "designed to afford its students well-rounded physical, intellectual, moral and religious training and instruction." The St. Mark's Board of Trustees intends for the school to be a diverse community of teachers and students who share a love of learning and who strive for high achievement in whatever they undertake.

Challenging studies in the Sciences, Arts, and Humanities form the basis of a St. Mark's education. Teachers work to instill an enthusiasm for learning, to encourage independent and critical judgment and to demonstrate the methods for making sound inquiries and for effective communication. To complement this academic experience, St. Mark's offers boys a rich variety of opportunities for involvement and leadership in the school community and on its playing fields, to realize their potential, rewarding those who strive as well as those who achieve.

St. Mark's aims to prepare young men for assuming leadership and responsibility in a competitive and changing world. To this end, the school professes and upholds certain values. These values include the discipline of postponing immediate gratification in the interest of earning eventual, hard-won satisfaction; the responsibility of defending one's own ideas, of respecting the views of others and of accepting the consequences for one's own actions; and an appreciation for the lively connection between knowledge and responsibility, privilege and the obligation to serve.

Overview

St. Mark's School of Texas, one of the premier schools for boys in the country, seeks an Upper School head to lead the Upper School division (grades 9-12). The Upper School head at St. Mark's School of Texas oversees the academic, administrative and co-curricular programs of the Upper School division. This individual will work closely with faculty, staff, students and parents to foster a positive and inclusive educational environment that promotes academic excellence, character development and personal growth.

The School's mission to develop boys into good men is realized through its excellent academic and co-curricular program and intentional approach to character and leadership education. St. Mark's describes a boy's path through the School as his "Path to Manhood" and places equal emphasis on each student's academic and character development. Throughout a student's time in Upper School, each student develops an understanding of essential concepts, virtues and skills that will help him thrive. The next Upper School head will be equally committed to advancing these essential elements of a boy's experience in Upper School at St. Mark's.

Responsibilities

The Upper School head will:

- Provide visionary leadership to the Upper School division, ensuring alignment with the School's mission, values and strategic goals.
- Foster a culture of academic excellence, innovation and intellectual curiosity among faculty and students.
- Collaborate with department chairs and faculty to develop and implement a rigorous and comprehensive curriculum that meets the needs of a diverse student body.
- Promote the use of innovative instructional strategies and technologies to enhance teaching and learning experiences.
- Support and evaluate the professional growth of a small team of colleagues.
- Provide ongoing professional development opportunities and support for faculty, encouraging their growth as educators and leaders.
- Create a supportive and inclusive community where students feel valued, respected and safe.
- Foster a culture of student involvement through the promotion of extracurricular activities, clubs and service-learning opportunities, with particular focus on character and leadership development.
- Build and maintain strong relationships with parents, promoting open and effective communication channels.
- Oversee the scheduling of classes, student activities and major events in the Upper School division.
- Collaborate with the headmaster, associate headmaster and other division heads to promote a cohesive educational experience across all divisions.

Qualifications and Personal Attributes

- Strong understanding of adolescent development, curriculum design and instructional best practices.
- Excellent interpersonal and communication skills, with the ability to build positive relationships with students, parents, faculty and staff.
- Demonstrated ability to lead and inspire a diverse community of learners.
- Knowledge of current educational trends and a commitment to ongoing professional development.
- A collaborative and inclusive leadership style, with the ability to make informed decisions and manage complex situations effectively.
- Deep appreciation of and affection for working with students in grades 9-12 and the teachers who support them, leading with warmth and a sense of humor and kindness.
- The willingness to balance over 100 years of history and tradition with a commitment to evolving best practices and openness to new ideas.
